Modern architecture is a style that focuses on using new technology and materials to design buildings. These buildings, with lots of new ideas, are both practical and beautiful. A great example of modern architecture is the Danjiang Bridge in New Taipei City, Taiwan, which is being built by Zaha Hadid Architects, a British architecture and design firm. This bridge will be a remarkable achievement in engineering and design once it is finished.

The Danjiang Bridge is built using sustainable materials like steel and concrete that make it strong and safe enough. Modern construction methods are also employed in building the bridge to make sure its longevity, reducing the need for frequent repairs or replacements. The bridge is kind to the environment because the design includes green areas and features that help protect nature. This makes the bridge a good example of how modern architecture can be eco-friendly and sustainable. Another interesting thing about the Danjiang Bridge is the attractive appearance: the unique curved shape, which is held up by cables. Such smooth curves stretch along the nearby river, and give the bridge a natural look. These all show how architects can be creative and innovative to build extraordinary structures.

In a word, the Danjiang Bridge is a fantastic representation of modern architecture. It demonstrates the values of using new technology, caring for the environment, and thinking outside the box in the design. It is a project that not only looks amazing but also sets a high standard for future architecture projects.

(A) The bridge is located in northern Taiwan.
(B) Zaha Hadid Architects is an Asian company.
(C) The German Group is responsible for the construction.
(D) The appearance of the bridge is full of regular shapes.

40. What materials are used in constructing the Danjiang Bridge?
(A) Wood and glass.
(B) Steel and concrete.
(C) Bricks and cables.
(D) Plastic and aluminum.
41. What makes Danjiang Bridge appear natural in its environment?
(A) Its vivid colors. (B) Its sustainable materials.
(C) Its smooth curves. (D) Its nearby rivers.
42. What is the closest meaning to the underlined phrase “think outside the box”?
(A) To set higher standards.
(B) To show visual appeal.
(C) To explore unusual ideas.
(D) To inspire young architects.
