Chocolate is one of the most popular foods in the world. Many people celebrate their birthdays with a chocolate cake. On Valentine's Day, people express their love with a box of chocolates. On a hot day, people love to eat chocolate ice cream. On a cold night, people like to sip hot cocoa. Chocolate brownies and chocolate chip cookies are favorites for many people at any time. Some people even eat ants and grasshoppers that are covered with chocolate!

This popular sweet starts as small pink flowers on a cacao tree, a plant that grows in tropical countries. A small number of these flowers develop into pods. Each pod contains about 30–50 cacao beans, and they can be harvested twice a year. After the harvest, it is time for cacao farmers to transport their produce to factories all over the world. A wide variety of chocolate products, such as chocolate bars and cocoa powder, will be made from the cacao beans after a series of production steps.
